

FAIR WEATHER AND BIG CROWDS FOR THE EXHIBITION TODAY

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR AND OLD SOL FORMALLY OPENED EX

Ceremony Took Place This Afternoon Amid the Greatest Enthusiasm

AT DIRECTOR'S LUNCHEON

Much Optimism Was in Evidence and Management Was Congratulated

With merry sunshine and invigorating breezes, laughing crowds and cheery officials, the Edmonton Exhibition opened with a rush this morning. The formal opening was marked by the arrival of the Lieutenant Governor and his party on the grounds shortly after noon today. Only the heartiest of optimism through the rain of yesterday could have foreseen the success of today; the loaded cars, the crowded streets, and the rush at the gates, all testify to the record attendance which will be at the fair this year. Everything was in readiness for a change in the weather and the smiling face of the heavens encouraged the officials to renewed efforts. The judging which commenced yesterday, continued today and it is expected that the judges will complete their work tomorrow. The excellence of all exhibits is unquestioned and will be attested by everyone, once the grounds dry sufficiently for them to be seen. Meanwhile the first day racing program will be carried out and the generous accommodation of the stand will enable all to partake of this form of entertainment dry-shod. It is anticipated that the grounds will be firm and dry enough to allow the crowds to go anywhere by three this afternoon. The "dread" reports were on hand this morning to be ready for any emergency. At a meeting held at 9:30 it was decided that weather conditions warranted the formal opening of the exhibition and the launching of the first day's program. Although crowds

The winning in the competition for suggesting the best name for the amusement street at the fair is Miss Bessie Forin, whose suggestion, the "Billiken Boulevard" was judged to be the best by representatives from the three Edmonton dailies.

SUNSHINE DRAWS CROWDS TO THE EX

Everything Looking Fine Today and Grounds Are Drying Up Fast

Results in Dairy and Poultry Departments—There Are Many Excellent Exhibits

Greatly to the relief of the minds of everyone who had any connection or interest in the exhibition, this morning dawned fine and sunny, with a cool breeze which is doing wonders towards drying up the grounds. Even this morning early, the roads around the exhibition were in a much better condition and it was possible for pedestrians to cross them without getting muddy to the knees. At ten o'clock when the exhibition opened quite a crowd of sightseers arrived and immediately started round to inspect the stock and from that time on the visitors came by every car, in fact, the cars from 9 o'clock on were so full that there was scarcely standing room. This morning the carpenters, electricians and other workmen were busy around the grounds putting the finishing touches to their work. Barne's circus was very busy erecting the remainder of its side shows and getting the cages into position. The Edmonton exhibitors who have secured spaces have put in exhibits that really show the progressiveness of the city. J. Y. Griffin has a large exhibit, as also has Campbell & Ottewill and the Edmonton City Dairy Company.

The results of the judging of the dairy produce were turned in by the judges this morning and the fresh crops of butter and bushels of new laid eggs fully testify as to the fitness of Alberta to become a mixed farm province. A large number of "highly recommended" cards have been distributed by the judges to a large number of these dairy exhibits which bears record to the general excellence of the produce. In the horticultural department there are attractive exhibits from all over the province, one of the most pleasing being a collection of roses exhibited by T. B. Morrow of Strathcona. Mrs. Noble of Edmonton, who was awarded first prize in class 600, showed a large fascina in full bloom. The province of British Columbia has a fine exhibit of the products of that province. Fresh fruits of every variety from the different districts are on show, which give a good idea of the fruit producing capabilities of the country.

The prizes for the best collection of garden products was awarded to John Hope of Edmonton. This competition was for amateurs only and certainly Mr. Hope's collection is a marvelous proof of what can be done in an Edmonton garden. Amelia L. Barber of Edmonton won a prize for a table decoration in flowers which certainly is a pretty piece of work. It is mainly composed of sweet peas with sprays of asparagus fern set round a lace dolly. Mrs. Tromsdorff of Strathcona secured the prize offered by Carter & Co. for the best seed peas grown from their seeds and the Covert-Carmichael prize for professionally grown garden products from seeds.

LITTLE DROPS OF WATER AND LITTLE DABS OF MUD —AT THE EX YESTERDAY

"Is it muddy down there?" a gentleman remarked to the passengers in general on the way down to the exhibition grounds in a street car. The car was filled with men who had been there, men who were looking after stock and other exhibits, and there was such a hush of laughter that the questioner hid his face in his hat with shame. Of course it's muddy, the driest, blackest and that one could find anywhere; Alberta mud in fact. A shoe shine shop on the way home outside the exhibition gates would make sufficient in a day for the proprietors to live in peace and plenty for the rest of their lives. However, the soil underneath is sandy and given a little sun and breeze the grounds would soon be high and dry again.

Mud, mud, oceans of mud, was the most noticeable thing at the Exhibition Park yesterday afternoon. Several well-known citizens were observed with one foot stuck in the rich Alberta soil and the other leg poised gracefully in the air, while their hands were occupied in groping for submerged rubbers. And the language in the vicinity made even the hardened reporters blush.

Secretary Harrison is a walking example of pure Western optimism. Wading along in the afternoon, up to the knees in mud and with the soft drizzling rain percolating quietly down his neck, he still had the courage to smile at a passerby and yell: "We shall have a nice bright day to-morrow. As you may see, we can be cheerful on a day like yesterday despite a bath in the Hall of Fame."

There was nearly a fatal accident at the park yesterday afternoon. A reckless visitor made a foolhardy attempt to cross the race track and was going down for the third time when he was pulled out by the scruff of the neck. Immediately afterwards life preservers were hung along the fence.

Hungry scribbles showed an unusual interest in the exhibits of fruit from British Columbia. The gentlemanly attendant, after answering numerous inquiries, noticed the ravenous looks on their countenances, and sent them away happy, with a nice rosy apple apiece.

The visible supply of ice cream could have been bought for one sweet song. It was the music of the sizzling waffle-irons, and the pleasurable odor of frying onions that attracted the attention, and trace of the passing throng.

There was one sign that appropriately fitted the occasion. On a building near the grand stand was a strip of bunting which read "The Dew-Drift Cafe." And the weather was certainly dewy.

Quite a crowd of onlookers was clustered around one of the circus wagons, which was up to the hubs in mud, while three teams hopelessly tried to extricate it. After one strenuous pull, the wagon leaned at a precarious angle, and at the same time the imprisoned rulers of the jungle set up a mighty roar. The crowd melted away like an ice cream cone in the mouth of a street arab.

Visitors to the grounds, who are inclined to wander in the vineyard, will be delightfully surprised to see a certain well-known beverage advertised for sale. We are sorry to disillusion them, but a more intimate acquaintance with the "breeze" will disclose the fact that it is a local option here of the deepest dye. Still P. T. Barnum used to say that the dear public loves to be fooled and probably he was right.

It was a woe-begone fortune teller that gazed sadly out from a tent door. Business was poor, the weather was cold, and to add to these misfortunes, the tent was leaking.

One old lady got on to one of the slippery bits and skated along for ten yards at a marvelous speed, and then apitfully gave it up and sat down. At least it looked as if she had given it up, but she thought that the world had slipped away from underneath her, and said so, fiercely.

In the cattle and horse buildings there is the finest collection of show animals that has ever been brought together in the province, and it is a pleasure to the able and cheerful men on a clean plain floor, not in a sea of mud, as is generally the case at most stock shows. When one of the directors was passing out, a messenger boy's opped him and asked if he would tell him at the outside ticket office to come and inspect them on a clean plain floor, not in a sea of mud, as is generally the case at most stock shows.

At another corner, an enterprising agent, mounted on a box, extolled the virtues of a patent potato peeler, offering the ingenious device, with a grand piano and an automobile thrown in as an inducement to buy; all for "fifty cents, five dimes, one half dollar."

FINE STOCK SHOWN AT THE EXHIBITION

The Prize Winners in Cattle, Sheep and Swine Classes Are Numerous

CROWDS ARE PLEASED

Many Visitors Inspect the Various Exhibits and Comment Favorably Upon Them

One could not but be struck with the excellence of the stock raised in Alberta on going through the cattle sheds this morning. Shorthorns and Herefords among the beef cattle were in the majority, though Polled Angus were also well represented. When one remembers that most of these cattle are in the open the year round the superiority of the Alberta climate for stock raising is easily recognized. The following stockmen have exhibited from their herds: Cresswell, of Edmonton; O. Palmer, Lacombe; Shields, of Brandon; Ballantyne, with Herefords; Ellet, of Strathcona; W. E. Tees, of Tees; Elliot, of Irma; Withford, Angus herds; J. Carswell, R. W. Caswell, of Saskatoon; Lyall, of Strone; Rice Sheppard, of Edmonton, in Shorthorns.

The judging this morning was carried on by Mr. Geo. Hunter of Edmonton, the well-known cattle expert, who has had ample experience in judging all over Canada.

The following were the results in beef cattle:

Bulls, 3 years and over—1st, J. M. Bruce, of Lathburn; 2nd, Jas. Caswell, of Saskatoon; 3rd, J. H. Melick, of Edmonton; 4th, C. F. Lyall, of Strone.

Bulls, 18 months to 2 years—1st, J. M. Bruce, of Lathburn; 2nd, Rye, of Edmonton; 3rd, Rice Sheppard, of Strathcona.

Bulls, 12 months to 18 months—1st, C. F. Lyall, of Strone; 2nd, R. W. Caswell, of Saskatoon; 3rd, J. Caswell, of Saskatoon; 4th, J. Carswell, of Saskatoon.

Bull calves, 6 months to 12 months—1st, R. W. Caswell; 2nd, Rice Sheppard.

The judging of the cattle will be completed this afternoon and tomorrow morning, and a start will be made with the horses.

The following are the winners among the sheep owners. The judge for this department was Geo. Hunter.

BANDS PLAYED ON JASPER AVE.

"There was music in the air," this morning on Jasper avenue when three bands, the 22nd, the city bands, and the "Iron" band, of Strathcona, city, marched and played with a will.

Jasper from Fraser avenue to Third street was one mass of people, most of them wandering aimlessly about, seeing and hearing all there was to be seen and heard, while the unfortunate minority were on their daily grind, causing their luck and envying the good fortune of those who could do as they pleased.

There was a band at the corner of Fraser, one at First street and another at Second street, while frequently they would swap corners and on taking up their new place would endeavor to spoil the good impression of their predecessors by doing so much better.

At another corner, an enterprising agent, mounted on a box, extolled the virtues of a patent potato peeler, offering the ingenious device, with a grand piano and an automobile thrown in as an inducement to buy; all for "fifty cents, five dimes, one half dollar."

London Man Says United States Is Growing Stronger Every Day for Free Trade

London, Aug. 24.—The secretary of the Free Trade union, who has just returned from a tour of the United States, says that the movement against the tariff is gaining force every day. The movement is in the hands of men who are trained economists and who are also able to point out the real cause for the decline in the purchasing power of wages.

GOVT. MAY BUILD COAST ELEVATORS

Sir Wilfrid at Prince Rupert Looks Forward to Wheat Trade With Orient

TO BUILD LIGHT HOUSES

Will Make Coast Navigation Speedy and Safe in the Near Future

Prince Rupert, B. C., Aug. 24.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier had a trip over the completed portion of the transcontinental, a distance of some seventeen miles, and continued his exploration trip on the Hudson Bay steamer Skeena, visiting the native village of Metlatala and the Anglican school there. Addressing the crowd from the government office platform at Prince Rupert, the premier declared that the transcontinental railroad back the Canadian horizon a thousand miles. The premier referred to trade prospects and possibilities and also referred to the magnitude of sea importations and forecasted the Orientals turning from rice to wheat, adding that the government were considering the construction of elevators at Vancouver and Prince Rupert. He also said that following a conference with Capt. Nicholson he decided that the government must install fifteen lights and take other precautions to make navigation speedy and safe. The premier closed with a patriotic invocation.

20,000 MILES FOR JUST TWO CENTS

On the 18th of May last a letter was posted at Gibraltar by a sailor named Robert Daly, addressed to his brother, J. H. Daly, Edmonton, Alberta, Canada.

Before that letter reached the person to whom it was addressed it travelled a distance of 20,000 miles, or over three times the distance between Gibraltar and Edmonton, although the letter, which subsequently went to Hanbury, Ireland. The letter followed at Bantary the sailor was again transferred, this time to H.M.S. King Edward VII, flagship of the channel squadron, which shortly afterwards steamed enroute to Portsmouth. The letter again kept on the sailor's track, but evidently missed him at Portsmouth, being sent back to Gibraltar, where it was originally posted. Notwithstanding the fact that the outer envelope was pretty well marked up with read-addresses and post office stamps, there was still room in a corner for another address and after travelling about for over three months again made an appearance at the Edmonton post office, and was eventually delivered to J. H. Daly.

G.T.P. COULDN'T SUPPLY MEN

Had to Ask Winnipeg Before They Could Place Watchman at City Crossings

ON WAY TO FAIR GROUNDS

City and C. N. R. Placed Several, However—City Hall News

The city commissioners some days ago wrote to the G.T.P. and C.N.R. asking the railroads to co-operate with the city in an endeavor to prevent accidents during exhibition week by the placing of watchmen on all the railway crossings on the way to the fair grounds. The city agreed to place watchmen at First street, Synclair avenue, Nanayo avenue and at the city park. The C.N.R. in reply also agreed to assist and placed watchmen at the Queens avenue and McDougall street crossings. But the G.T.P. stated in a letter dated yesterday that it would be necessary to obtain authority from the general superintendent of the road at Winnipeg, advising the commissioners that their request had been forwarded to him. When the authority does come from Winnipeg, the exhibition will be almost over. It seems peculiar that such an institution as the G.T.P. must seek authority from the higher official circles before a couple of watchmen can be placed at points in order to prevent accidents.

The city commissioners have decided to place a waiting room at the junction of Synclair and Alberta avenues for the winter months.

In order that a money bylaw in connection with the building of the Nanayo avenue railway may be prepared for submission to the ratifiers, the commissioners have asked Assistant Vice President Peters of the C.P.R. for the exact amount of the city's share of the cost of the railway. The approximate amount is $124,600.

The preliminary plans of the subway which the city has received from the railway company has met with the approval of the civic authorities with the exception of a few minor details.

The tender of S. Child for the construction of a brick wall between the boiler house and the fair engine room at the power plant, and also for the strengthening of the boiler house, has been accepted by the city commissioners. The contract is only for the labor, the city to supply the material.

As the city is about to improve Nanayo avenue by paving it from the railway tracks to Norwood boulevard, the C.N.R. and G.T.P. have been asked to contribute with the Dominion railway act and improve the right of way at that point at the same time.

'PEG STOCKMAN' HURT IN A WRECK

Rear End Collision on C. P. R.—Another Wreck Put Wires Out of Business

Kenora, Aug. 24.—David McCullough, a stockman, aged 36, en route from Winnipeg to Montreal, was severely injured about the head and back this morning at Hawk, 25 miles east, in a rear-end collision on the Canadian Pacific. He was in charge of several cars of stock and was asleep in the car when a light engine pitched into the rear of the train. He was brought to the hospital at Kenora. Another wreck occurred at Bixby, 120 miles east of here. Several empty box cars were pitched over an embankment. They struck and broke a telegraph pole which completely demoralized all the eastern wires for several hours.

"ANY OLD PEG FOR TO HANG MY HAT"

That's Home Sweet Home to Many Visitors in the City at Present

Edmonton seldom has seen its accommodation of visitors strained to the extent that it is at present, and if the crowds of strangers in Edmonton today are augmented very materially, as they probably will, there is going to be something doing. There is hardly any of any person going to any of the hotels and asking for quarters, for in each case the reply is sure to be, "crowded to the roof."

In many of the hotels last night people even asked to be permitted to sleep in the chairs of the parlors, and although such a thing is contrary to the rules of most hostlers, yet it is quite possible that if any interested person cared to take a glance around the parlors, they might have seen quite a number of the upholstered chairs with occupants sitting or half lying in the most unique positions, enjoying the beautiful hills, valleys and silvery lakes of the land of nod.

The boarding houses are also filled from cellar to garret and many people have made fruitless searches for accommodations. In other cases where there is any event, which attracts an abnormally large number

Eckstrom Wants Bonapier to Default Seven Games, Houston and Wheeler for Big Series

(The Albertan.)

President Eckstrom of the Western Canada Baseball League has sent a proposition to Moose Jaw suggesting that the club consent to Regina defaulting the last seven games, which series begins on Thursday. The league is running the Regina club now and Mr. Eckstrom figures it out that it would be good business to cancel the last seven games because Regina is not drawing card at any of the towns. Mr. Eckstrom had not heard from Moose Jaw when the Albertan telephoned last night. It is almost certain that this will go through. Of course Moose Jaw will get credit for the winning of the seven games.

If Regina defaults the last seven games to Moose Jaw, which is almost certain. Umpires Wheeler and Houston will work together in the last series between Calgary and Edmonton, if it should not go through, in all probability it will be Wheeler alone.

This is not very good news for the Calgary fans, who haven't much use for Wheeler, who umpires like an overgrown schoolboy most of the time and hasn't any more nerve than a poisoned fly. He has given enough exhibitions of himself here during the last few days to have banished him from any baseball league where baseball was properly played. However, the management is very anxious to have Edmonton win the series. Houston worked here only a couple of games and seemed pretty much all right.

CARNEY TRIES FOR A FIGHT

Invited Wheeler Behind the Stand but His Ump's Was Too Wise

Umpire Wheeler seems to have made himself very unpopular in Calgary. The following extract from the Calgary Herald mentions no names but probably refers to Carney and Wheeler.

It goes on to say: "Umpires are peculiar people. We have seen them here in Calgary, and some of them are so yellow that if they saw their own shadow on a barn in twilight they would croak on the spot. I remember one, poor hapless you do, too, who had a fight with the manager of a certain team in front of the grand stand under a certain delusion. He then hid himself behind closed doors in a small room behind the stand for nearly an hour after the game afraid to come out, even when a number of cop-paroled his outside all the time. Well, just to show you what kind of stuff this ump's was made of I will tell you something. The next day after the quarrel, the ump's was met behind the stand by the manager alone, and I happened to be standing near. 'Come on over to the big grand stand,' the manager said to the ump's, 'where no one will know anything about it, and we will settle this little thing. I'll beat you or you'll beat me.' The ump's made tracks for the ticket office, with a frightened look on his face, saying: 'You've got the best of me,' and then turning round at the door he shoved out his hand towards the manager and pleaded for him to shake and make up. The manager replied, 'I'll knock your block off, you—thing,' and made for the ump's, but the ump's jumped into the ticket box and closed the door. 'You've got the best of me,' I heard the ump's say from inside, and the manager replied, 'You bet I have, and if I ever get you alone you'll settle this affair with me,' and I listened no longer. Too bad some umpires are like that, way. He didn't deserve sympathy, for he plainly showed he was a coward and knew he had done something to be well ashamed of. Of course you know all this happened in New York.

MARSH AND DEERFOOT

Will Race 12 Miles at Lethbridge this Evening.

Lethbridge, Aug. 24.—John D. Marsh the famous Winnipeg long distance runner arrived in Lethbridge yesterday morning preparatory to a match of 12 miles with Deerfoot, the Macedonian runner, at the ball park, tonight at 7 o'clock.

Marsh holds the fifteen mile championship of the world, but this race will be for twelve miles, at which distance he will attempt to establish himself as the right of the championship title.

Deerfoot's showing against the top notchers in the east lately, has given him numerous Macedonian backers confidence in his Indian beating the conqueror of Acoose, and they will be down here strongly to support him, it is said.

"THE BURGOMASTER"

Edmonton has now paid tribute for two evenings with crowded houses, to Gus Weinburg, the original "Burgomaster," and his company of clever actors, in their offering of that well-known musical comedy. Weinburg and his company deserve all the commendation that is given them, for they are a company of merit and they live up to their advance notices in their offering in the Empire Theatre this week.

Mr. Weinburg's company consists mostly of girls, with a pretty girl chorus that is strong, but there is a male chorus that render several tuneful selections with real merit.

"The Burgomaster" will ever be a popular musical comedy. The wit and humor is fresh and the songs are pretty. There are little inconsistencies in the plot and dialogue that are privileged in such comedies set to music, but they detract nothing from the entertainment.

There is very little to criticize in the presentation of the comedy by the company with which Mr. Weinburg has surrounded himself. The play is a long one, but there is not a moment in which the company allows the entertainment to drag, and they are on hand with the humor and the fun at every turn.

Crowded houses will probably greet Mr. Weinburg on every evening on which he cares to play the "Burgomaster."

AT THE LYCEUM.

The Sherman Musical Comedy Co. will offer a bang-up comedy of fun, music and humorous situations for their change of programme Thursday called "Girls at the Beach," and they will just about win the "regulars" at the Lyceum, as they never say die and will tap the fun barrel from the time the barrier rises. Tom Deeson will be the main comedian and Tom is a comedian (real) and he makes for undiluted joy eight hundred and eighty yards to the mile.

The chorus, who are gaily singing and dancing their way into the hearts of all will be well supplied with excellent material to work on the last half of the week.

There is a matinee every day with two shows at night, and a complete change twice a week.

STARLAND

"Ranch Life in the Great Southwest." Never before has any one picture been accorded such a hearty reception as this thrilling Selig subject had at Starland last night. Clear in conception, true in every detail, it portrays the life of the plains, which will soon be only a memory, in such a style that the most severe critic is delighted. It was impossible to seat the huge crowd so the management, after much trouble and expense have secured it for Wednesday also to satisfy their numerous patrons. Don't miss seeing this great production, it is positively your last opportunity.

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES,
Author of "Hearts Courageous," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1909, THE DOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

All at once the horse snorted violently, almost unseating her. A man was lying by the side of the road, tossing and muttering to himself. She forced the snorting animal closer and, leaning from the saddle, saw who it was. In a moment she was off and beside the prostrate form, a spasm of dread clutching at her throat at sight of the nervous limbs, the chilly pallor of the brow, the fever spots in the cheeks.

A wave of pity swept over her. He was ill and alone. He could not be left there. He must have shelter. She looked fearfully about her. What could she do? In that town, whose intolerance and dislike she had seen so acutely demonstrated, was there no one who would care for him? She turned her head, listening to a hearing sound—footsteps were plodding up the road.

She called, and presently a pedestrian emerged from the half dark and came toward her.

He bent over the form she showed him.

"It's Stiles," he said with a chuckle. "I heard he'd come back." The chuckle turned to a cough, and he shook his head.

"This is sad! You could never believe how I have labored with the boy, but—he turned out his hands—'you see, there is the temptation. It is his unhappy weakness.'"

Jessie remembered the yellow, smirky face now. She had passed him on the day Tom Fidler had visited with her from the Mountain Valley House, and the lawyer had told her he lived in the cabin just below the Knob, where she so often sat. She felt a quiver of repulsion.

"He is not intoxicated," she said coldly. "He is ill. You know him, don't you?"

"Know him?" he echoed and laughed—a dry, cackling laugh. "I ought to. And I guess he knows me." He shook the inert arm. "Get up, Hugh!" he said. "It's Prendergast!"

There flashed through her mind the phrases of the early hotel keeper, "an side partner, Prendergast!" Could it be? Had Hugh really lived in the cabin in which she had so often peered down during those past weeks? And with this chosen crew?

She touched Prendergast's arm. "He is ill, I say," she repeated. "He must be cared for at once. Your cabin is on the hillside, isn't it?"

"His cabin," he corrected. "A rough place, but it has sheltered us both. I am but guide, philosopher and friend."

She bit her lips. "Lift him on my horse," she said. She stooped and put her hands under the twitching shoulders. "I will help you. I am quite strong."

With her aid he lifted the aching form on to the saddle and supported it, while Jessalene led the way.

"Here is the cutoff," he said proudly. "Ah, you know it!" for she had turned into the side path that led along the hill, under the gray, snake-like fume—the shortest route to the grassy shelf on which the cabin stood.

The byway was steep and rugged, and rhododendron clumps caught at her ankles, and once she heard a small slip over the dry rustle of leaves, but she went on rapidly, dragging at the bridle, turning back now and then anxiously to urge the horse to greater speed. She scarcely heard the offensively hoarse compliments which Prendergast offered to her courage.

It seemed an eternity they climbed. In reality it was scarcely twenty minutes before they reached the grassy knoll and the cabin, whose crazy swinging door stood wide to the night air. She tied the horse, went in and at Prendergast's direction found matches and lit a candle. The bare, two room interior it revealed was unkempt and disordered. Rough bunks, a table and a couple of beaver chairs were almost its only furniture. The window was broken and the roof admitted sun and rain. Prendergast laid the man they had brought on one of the bunks and threw over him a shabby blanket.

"My dear young lady," he said, "you are a good Samaritan. How shall we thank you, my poor friend here and I?"

Jessalene had taken money from her pocket, and now she held it out to him. "He must have a doctor," she said. "You must fetch one."

UNSELFISHNESS.

To the Editor of the Capital, Edmonton, Alta.

Sir—Your correspondent, Mr. J. A. Clarke, in your issue of the 22nd inst., expresses his surprise that the press or the labor leaders of this district has not seen fit to repudiate Mr. A. W. Smithers, capitalist, on account of the statement credited to him to the effect that "the present high cost of labor in Canada, if kept up, will cause the withdrawal of British capital from this country."

Mr. Clarke evidently feels it his duty to defend (?) the workers of Canada and to prove that the workers will be benefited by wide publicity of the fact (?) that his wages are higher than elsewhere.

I would like to say right here that although a member of a trade union, I am not posing as, nor have I any wish to be, a so-called leader of labor, but I do think that Mr. Clarke's letter should not remain unchallenged, that someone should expose the ignorance of the position of the working class which is displayed in his letter.

Mr. Clarke, in his one and a quarter column letter, has told us—that "that Mr. Smithers is credited with making a certain statement. To disprove that statement, he tells us that wages are not as high here as in Alaska or the Yukon; that in those places the Smithers's rule does not hold good, and further, if we advertise widely, that we are getting the biggest wages in Canada, the Smithers's rule will not affect us here."

Let us see whether the statement of Mr. Clarke will hold water, and to do this we must analyze the position of the working class.

First of all, the worker is paid a certain wage for a certain period of labor, or for a certain amount of labor done, according to the different trades, so are the wages different, and while one would get $2 per day, another $3, another $5, yet they will all agree that their wages are the amount of money which their employer pays them for his services performed by them for him. Thus the workers are merchants, selling their labor power, or their mental and physical power, to do things. They cannot sell their labor, for that does not exist until it is put into action and incorporated with the raw material which is the property of their employer. So that the employer could not sell that as it is the property of his employer. The worker in selling this labor power for a certain sum is enabled to buy certain quantities of the products of other men's labor, such as meat, clothing, fuel, light, etc. His wages, then, express the proposition in which his labor is exchanged with other commodities. The exchange value of his work, and the exchange value of any commodity expressed in money is called its price. A wage then is the price of labor power or the mental and physical ability to do things. Take the case of any workman, a brickmaker, for instance. The employer supplies him with the clay and machinery, in fact all the necessary requirements incidental to brick-making, with the exception of his labor power which the workman supplies himself. After the bricks are made and ready for sale, does the workman take a share of the bricks as his wages? By no means. Were he to take too or even less of the bricks he would be liable to be convicted for larceny. The bricks belong to his employer, and the workman is paid for the energy he has expended with money. He receives his wages out of the value his labor-power has created, but with money previously provided. It may be possible the employer cannot sell the bricks. It may be that by their sale the employer does not realize the wages paid. It may be that he makes a large profit by their sale. But the workman has nothing to do with all this. His employer has purchased the workman's labor-power in the same way as he purchased his machinery, so that cost of labor power or wages is part of the cost of production in which must also be included the cost of wear and tear of machinery and premises.

Labor power is, therefore, a commodity, it was not always wage-work, but it is a marketable commodity. The chattel slave did not sell his labor power. He was sold with his power once for all to the highest bidder. He was a commodity, which could be passed from one to the other, but his labor was not a commodity. The serf did not sell his labor-power. He belonged to the soil, which in turn belonged to his master. The serf paid tribute to his master in the form of the fruits of the soil. The free laborer to-day, on the other hand, sells himself in fractions. From day to day he sells, eight, ten, or even more hours of his life by action to the highest bidder—the owners of the raw material, in fact, the owners of the earth. The worker himself belongs neither to the soil nor to an owner, but those hours of his life which he sells belong to the man who buys them. The laborer can leave his employer when he pleases. The employer can fire the workman when he pleases, either as soon as he ceases to make a profit out of him or when the profit is not as big as he requires. But the laborer whose only source of life is the sale of his labor-power, cannot leave the whole class of his purchasers. He does not belong to any one employer but he does belong to the employing class.

We have seen then that wages are the price of the commodity labor-power. Wages are thus determined by the same law which regulates the price of any other commodity.

What then is this law of regulation and how is it determined?

I. The value of a commodity is determined by the duration of the socially necessary labor-time took to produce it.

II. By the law of supply and demand.

The price of a commodity may fluctuate above and below the cost of production. If the supply of an article is greater than the demand the tendency is for prices to fall; if the converse, then the reverse is true.

The effect of the law of supply and demand upon the market is so obvious that it would be a waste of time and valuable space to go into details, but perhaps the first statement is not quite so explicit.

The determination of price by cost of production is the same thing as its determination by the duration of labor-time which is required for the production of a commodity; for cost of production may be divided into (1) raw material and implements, that is, products of industry whose manufacture has cost a certain number of days' work and which therefore represents a certain duration of labor, and (2) actual labor, which is measured by its duration. The same general laws which universally regulate the price of commodities regulate of course wages, the price of labor.

Wages will rise and fall in accordance with the proportion between supply and demand; that is, if there are more applicants for the work than jobs to be had, wages will fall, if the opposite, wages will rise. Within these fluctuations the price of labor is regulated by its cost of production, that is by the duration of labor which is required to produce this commodity labor.

Now, what is the cost of production of labor-power itself? It is the cost required for the production of a laborer and his maintenance as a laborer.

The shorter the time requisite for instruction in any labor the less is the laborer's cost of production, and the lower are his wages, the price of his work. In those branches of industry which require no special training and where the mere bodily existence of the laborer is sufficient, the cost of his production and maintenance are almost limited to the cost of the necessities which are requisite to keep him alive. The price of his labor or the price of his production is therefore determined by the price of the bare necessities of his existence. But there is another consideration; the laborer's cost of production, and the employer reckons so much for wear and tear of the machinery of production in the cost of his commodities, and the laborer being in the same category must also be periodically replaced. So that we must reckon in the cost of labor-power the cost of its propagation, so that the race of laborers may be put in a position to multiply and to replace the worn-out workers by new ones. To sum up the cost of production of simple labor amounts to and the price of its cost determines his wages. This should make clear to everyone the absurdity of Mr. A. W. Smithers's contention. The worker of Canada may be getting higher wages (that is reckoned in dollars and cents) than the European worker, but if we calculate the purchasing power of wages we find that the Canadian worker gets what his European brother gets, a mere existence. When we take the statistics of the Department of Labor we find that in the last few years the cost of living has increased approximately 40 per cent, while the purchasing power of wages has decreased by practically the same percentage.

Now, how will the statement of that workingman's champion, Mr. Clarke, compare with the facts of the case? Publicity of higher wages! Result—working men will flock to this district. Effect—the supply of labor will be greater than the demand, with the inevitable consequence that the wages will be forced down and the workingman will have to adopt the advice of Mr. James Hill of railroad fame, who said, "the American people must learn to live cheaper like the European peasants."

Yours truly,
FRANK BLAKE.

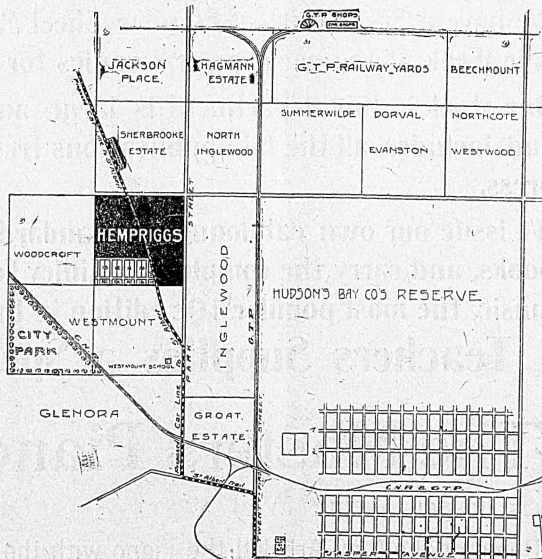

As a developer of energy and a strengthener of the will there is nothing so good to good old Poverty.

Everywhere about the town the query is heard, "Where are you put-

"Don't know yet," is the usual an-many know yet.

Every train to the city now brings in its load of people, coming for the fair, and it is now becoming a problem to know where everybody is going to be housed. Many are going to Strathcona to see if they cannot fare better there.

The restaurants are doing a rushing business, and the proprietors are gathelse's and gets out, to forget all about it in the excitement.

began arriving early in the day in rubber boots and the best of spirits. The real movement towards the fair only began at noon today, and it is expected that from now on, nothing will interfere with carrying out the full programme. Except for the judging the whole schedule is put back one day, so by consulting the printed program one can follow the list of each day's events.

The directors' luncheon was the scene of much enthusiasm, and notwithstanding the set back experienced yesterday, much optimism prevailed.
At the head table, sat Lieut-Governor
Bulye, a Premier Sifton, Hon Duncan
Marshall, Mayor Lee, President
Campbell, and Dr. Irwin.

At the conclusion of a delightful repast Premier Sifton and Hon Duncan Marshall were introduced by President Campbell and applause. In a brief address, Premier Sifton congratulated the officials of the exhibition on the magnificent result of their months of labor in making the exhibition a success.

Hon. Duncan Marshall, added a few words of eulogy to the premier's remarks, pointing out the very beneficial effect in the way of education that the exhibition would have, and result it would have in convincing people of the ideal conditions existing in this district.

At two o'clock this afternoon, the exhibition was formally declared open by Lt-Governor Bulye. Shortly before the hour he appeared before the grand stand, accompanied by President Campbell, and Premier Sifton, and occupied the platform opposite.
A guard of honor composed of fifty men of the 101st Fusiliers were drawn up as the band of the regiment played the national anthem, gave the customary salute.

His Honor in declaring the exhibition open, paid tribute to the excellence of the fair, and complimented those who were in charge of the arrangements. He pointed out the good effect it would have on the people who have come from a distance, as it would be a means of convincing them of the truth of the representations that have been made about this country.

There were three bands present, the 101st, city band, and the Strathcona band, and at the conclusion of the ceremony played Canadian national airs. The opening was most successful.

With the beginning of the afternoon, the crowds on the grounds began to be considerably augmented and everything points to a most successful day.

EDMONTON TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

C. A. McKim, Pres.
T. H. Clark, Sec.

There are no new developments in the Syndicate avenue murder mystery.
The police are still on the hunt for the two missing men who came down from the Wolf Creek camp with the murdered man and his friends, but they seem to have completely disappeared.
At present there is no reason to connect these two with the actual crime but it is felt that at least know something, if not a good deal about it.
It is quite possible, as one of the detectives said last night that there may have been among the number that came from the camp on the same train, other men who had their eyes on the murdered man's money.
